Subject: Establishment of Centre for Development of Biomaterials

Sharda University has established a dedicated 'Center for Development of Biomaterials' with the primary goal of advancing research, development, and application of biomaterials across diverse fields, including medicine, energy, and the environment. This center aspires to become a focal point for knowledge and innovation by bringing together experts from various disciplines to tackle significant challenges and advancements in the realm of biomaterials. Furthermore, it will actively encourage collaboration among academic, industrial, and healthcare institutions, with the ultimate aim of enhancing the overall quality of human life.

The Center for Development of Biomaterials has outlined a comprehensive set of objectives, including research and development, fostering innovation and technology transfer, promoting collaboration, offering education and training, maintaining standards and quality control, facilitating clinical translation, establishing industrial partnerships, ensuring regulatory compliance, disseminating knowledge, and contributing to economic development.

The Vice-Chancellor will oversee the operations of this center, which will be composed of the following members:

- |  |            |
